Welcome to match

match is the revolutionary way of getting more out of sporting events using the Internet.

Not only does it let two people place money against each other on the outcome of a game, but it also allows them to continue to put more money down as the action happens, until the very end of the game. What's more, because of our amazing new software, control of wager prices is right in the hands of those playing the game with the winner taking all the money. None of it goes to the tax man.

► Members should log in here to start wagering.

► To get a feel for how it all works, take the tour.

► When you're confident you understand the system, sign up to become a member.

, your offers become wagers

< back | 1 | 2 | 3 | 4 | 5 | 6 | 7 | next >

So, say you've made one offer at £4.00. One of three things can now happen:

1 Yours will be matched with a reciprocal offer (ie. an offer made by another Match member for the Blue side that, with yours, adds up to £10 - in this case £6.00). Now your offer has become a firm wager - whoever's side wins receives the £10. In this case, your account will be debited by £4.25 - that's your £4.00 offer plus 25p commission.

2 You choose to cancel your offer before a reciprocal is found.

3 The match ends before anyone makes a matching offer.

In the last two cases, the money will be refunded to your account immediately. You won't be charged any commission if your offer is not matched.

, what now?

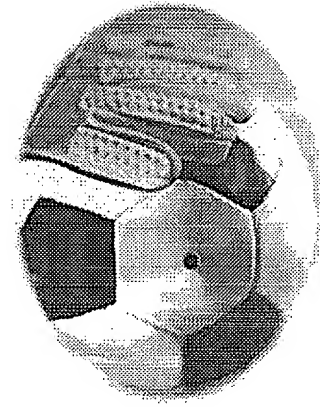

< back | 1 | 2 | 3 | 4 | 5 | 6 | 7 | next >

Once your offer has been matched, what next? You can either sit back and be content with one wager - or you can really get into the game. You can keep placing wagers right up to the final whistle, and as you'll see, the price people are willing to offer changes with the match. For instance, Coventry may get a last minute equaliser and, as in the case of a draw the away team is always considered the winner, you would probably want to change sides and back them instead. That way, you can cover yourself against any losses.

, tips & tactics

< back | 1 | 2 | 3 | 4 | 5 | 6 | 7 | next >

Not only can you wager interactively during the match, but you can also make offers days or even weeks in advance of the event.

Remember - the first in are the first to be matched, allowing you to make an early profit.

So, it's entirely possible to make a £4 offer for the red side, then later come back if the 'market price' has changed, and make a £4 offer for Blue. That way, assuming your offers have been matched, whichever side wins, you're guaranteed a £2 profit - you've wagered £8 and are going to get £10 no matter who comes out on top.

What's more, if you wager in this way on both sides, your account will be IMMEDIATELY credited with the £10, even if the match hasn't started yet.

This is the where real skill and judgment comes in.

The more you play, the more you'll understand the tactics behind Match, and the more you'll enjoy it.
